

BayCare launches new Connected Care Program to bring world-class care home

August 22, 2024

BayCare, a leading not-for-profit healthcare system, today announced the launch of a new connected care program designed to extend high-quality care to seniors with chronic conditions. In partnership with Cadence, a chronic disease management company, BayCare will leverage remote patient monitoring and virtual care technology to provide proactive and preventive care.

The program combines BayCare Medical Group's expert clinical team with a robust technology platform to deliver personalized care plans tailored to individual patient needs. By monitoring vital signs and other health metrics remotely, healthcare providers can intervene early, preventing complications and reducing the need for hospitalizations.

"BayCare is continuously exploring avenues to enhance the well-being of our patients and the professional lives of our physicians, providers and team members. Our commitment extends to innovative care delivery solutions," said Stephanie Connors, BayCare president and CEO. "This partnership offers a comprehensive solution that elevates the quality of care for patients with chronic conditions and empowers them to embrace healthier lifestyles. It's another example of BayCare's commitment to bring care where you need it, when you need it, and how you need it."

By collaborating with leading health systems and academic medical centers in the U.S., Cadence is helping patients access life-extending, guideline-directed medical therapy and care. Cadence's nurse-practitioner led care team is currently supporting more than 25,000 patients and more than 1,200 providers across 22 states. With monitoring and access to care 24/7, patients using Cadence have seen positive clinical outcomes, including an 61% reduction in heart failure hospital readmissions, 107% increase achieving goal blood pressure and 43% increase in achieving goal blood glucose levels.

“BayCare is one of the country’s most forward-thinking health systems, and we are excited to help them deliver proactive, personalized care from the comfort of their homes,” said Chris Altchek, CEO & founder of Cadence. “Our partnership makes it possible for primary care physicians to deliver personalized, 24/7 care to all of their patients with chronic disease.”
