

Introducing PM Recruiter – a new global job website for Project professionals

August 7, 2024

Project Management Global is delighted to announce the launch of PM Recruiter, a specialised job board dedicated exclusively to project management roles.

The new platform aims to streamline the recruitment process for both project managers and employers by providing a centralised hub for project management talent and opportunities across the world.

PM Recruiter offers a comprehensive suite of features designed to connect project managers with employers efficiently. Job seekers can create detailed profiles highlighting their project management expertise, certifications, and experience. Employers can post targeted job openings, search through a vast talent pool, and utilise advanced search filters to identify candidates with specific skill sets.

“Since Day One, Project Management Global has been dedicated to providing resources and support in one place that will help project managers of all abilities at whatever stage they are in their career,” said Nicola Benjamin, Founder of Project Management Global. “PM Recruiter aims to provide one of the first dedicated platforms for project managers to find roles across the world and understand the opportunities available to them.”

In addition to job listings, Project Management Global will continue to provide valuable resources for project managers, including industry news, career advice, and professional development opportunities. The platform also incorporates advanced matching algorithms to suggest suitable job openings based on candidates’ profiles.

Project Management Global is committed to fostering a thriving project management community and believes that PM Recruiter will become the go-to destination for project managers seeking new challenges and employers looking to hire top talent.
